

JEFF STONE

Jeff has more than 25 years of management and consulting experience focused on helping clients strengthen their personal, team, and organizational effectiveness. He has a real passion for helping leaders and teams through periods of growth and change – in particular, making the tricky cultural transition from entrepreneurial to more professionally managed organizations.

Jeff has coached senior managers and groups spanning all levels and functions in a wide range of industries. Examples of his clients include Accellent, Acusphere, Alkermes, Applied Materials, BP Chemicals, Carrier Corporation, Eisai Research Institute, Martinair, Smith & Nephew, and Vertex Pharmaceuticals.

In recent years, Jeff has worked extensively in the life sciences industry helping early-stage companies and their leaders navigate the challenging waters of rapid growth and expansion – or, as one client put it, “helping brilliant scientists become intelligent leaders.”

Jeff founded a coaching and consulting practice after spending seven years as a consultant and director of the Charter Oak Consulting Group, based in Hartford. Previously, he managed Outward Bound’s Professional Development Program on Thompson Island in Boston. Jeff spent his early career years in human resource management and organization development roles for two Fortune 50 companies, GTE and Johnson & Johnson.

Jeff holds a Master’s in Organization Development from American University/NTL Institute for Applied Behavioral Science in Washington, D.C., where he graduated with distinction. He earned his Bachelor’s degree in Management and Psychology from the University of Pennsylvania.

Jeff lives in South Dartmouth, Mass. with his wife and their three sons. He enjoys working with his boys on projects around their historic home (circa 1815) and loves to sail and hit the ski slopes as often as possible.
